

Indiana's Highly Qualified Teacher Requirements Out-of-State Teachers Amendment

A teacher who has met the highly qualified requirements in another state may be counted as highly qualified in Indiana. Therefore, if a teacher from out of state has passed a rigorous state licensing exam equivalent to the PRAXIS II or the National Teacher Exam (NTE) for the core academic subject/elementary content that is taught, and has both a bachelor's degree and a valid teaching license, the school corporation may count this teacher as highly qualified. Accordingly, if the out of state teacher has earned 100 points for the core academic subject/elementary content taught on the out of state HOUSSE, and has both a bachelor's degree and a valid teaching license, the school corporation may count this teacher as highly qualified.
